

Greetings,

Old age can either be a boom or bust, and it depends on the individual to decide. It is without a shadow of a doubt that being as they say "over the hill" has challenges and everyone handles these challenges differently. As one who is in his "golden years" (it must have been a young politician running for office who came up with that one) I can attest to the specific hurdles, (figuratively speaking I assure you) I must clear. However, these hurdles can be challenges rather than obstacles. From my personal experience let me list a few of the positive things about being old if you allow them to be.

* Don't fall for the line "it is time to let the young ones take over; my time has passed. If you do that you are turning over to those who have no experience the awesome responsibility that only you have the knowledge to offer. Help the young ones but stay close. Someday they will take over. In the meantime, help them mature.

* Don't think you have to climb into a mental wheelchair. Your brain is full of knowledge and you should not park it somewhere. Use it.

* Don't let your kids run your life unless it is absolutely necessary. Well-meaning children will try to tell you to take it easy, or remind you to do this or that. I hate cigarettes but don't let them tell you when you are 90 years that they are bad for your health. My kids know better than to tell me what to do. My signature is still on the will. I often hear folks say their children won't let them do this or that. My kiddos know better than that.

* Run for elective office. Old folks vote at a higher rate than young folks. You might be surprised the old geezers might elect you.

* Speaking of voting. Go the "greet and meet" rallies and require candidates to answer questions.

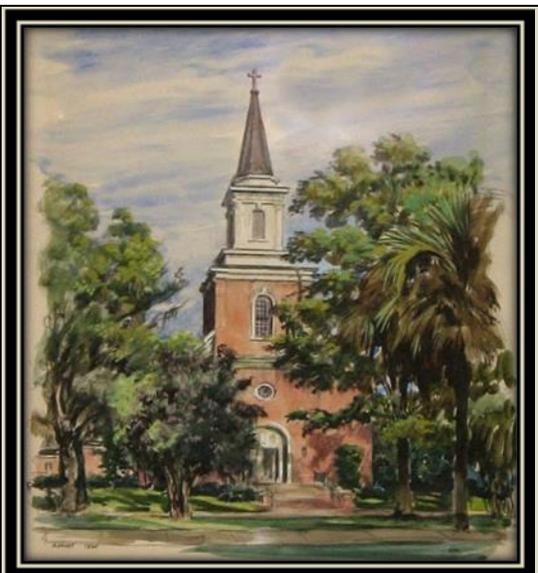

* Show a moral example to all you see, for the morals of today are in the gutter and America needs a good and godly example.

* Don't forget to jump (if able), shout, sing off key, dance (unless you are a primitive Baptist). Don't act your age, embarrass your kids, and have fun even at the bingo table.

* If anyone tries to stop you from having fun run over them with your wheelchair.

* And last but not least, never, never retire from life and living until God sends for you.

Blessings,
Pastor Kershaw

AT HOME BIBLE TRIVIA

Book of Colossians

In Colossians 1:15-18 we see that Christ's overall Lordship extends beyond things on this earth. Besides being Lord of His church, what else does this passage say that Christ is over or above?

What place is mentioned in verse 2:1?

Paul's chief reason for writing is to warn against false teachings that are being spread around the church. Consequently, which of the following does he stress throughout the letter?

..The need to obey the Roman authorities

..His credentials as an apostle

..Advice on pursuing a healthy lifestyle

..The supreme importance of Jesus

According to Paul in chapter one, what is God's secret that has now been revealed?

For he has rescued us from the dominion of _____ and brought us into the _____ of the Son he loves, in whom we have redemption, the forgiveness of sins."

(Colossians 1:13-14) What words complete this verse according to the New International Version?
